Is Your Mature Parrot Family Bird Healthy?

As a veterinary bird specialist for over 40 years, I have seen a lot of changes in avian medicine and in the marketplace. I opened the first bird & exotic clinic in the US, in Northern California, followed by the first national veterinary diagnostic laboratory for birds and exotics; both in the 1980s. As a resident of South Carolina for over eight years, I have found that over 90% of my patients are suffering from serious life-shortening malnutrition. Because they're eating a seed-based diet. With the rarity of qualified veterinarians and no real bird retailers, quality care information is quite lacking here in the region.

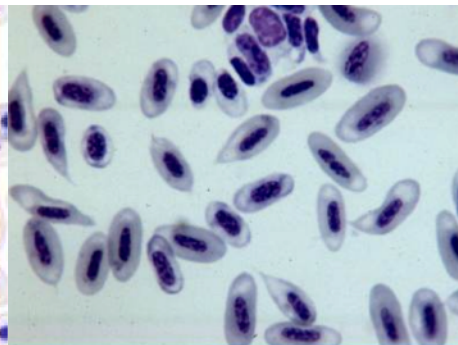

Malnutrition can result in chronic infections, liver disease, heart disease, kidney disease, skin problems, female problems, and bone problems and cancer.

A skilled periodic physical exam and bird care review is strongly recommended annually. In addition, diagnostic testing can identify some potential developing medical problems early.

Dr. Fudge offers a Well Bird Checkup Package that includes a Comprehensive Blood panel, and Bacterial Culture. DNA sexing, recommended for medical history, can be added to this profile.
